Dangerous Tackles

1. Dangerous Tackles

Players, when tackling should not:

- Place their opponent (head or body) in a vulnerable position which is inherently dangerous.

A dangerous tackle could be considered when the level of force is more than is normally expected in a given situation.

Doing so will be deemed to be rough conduct and will result in a free kick and possibly a report.

Cues:

- Excessive rotation, including slinging
- Arm or arms pinned
- Lifting legs (above horizontal)
- A tackle that drives or has 2 actions

Under the MRO Guidelines the tackle may be considered rough conduct if the tackle is of an “Inherently Dangerous” kind.
